

Etheric Geography Conference

Part 2: 17 September - 19 September 2021

Effect of Thinking on the Health of Ecosystems

What is our connection to the sacred? to our ecosystems? and how does our consciousness affect them? There has always been a connection to the subtle realms — the etheric — of environment, ecosystem, and Other. We connect to these worlds through the rhythms we create in life, the sacred spiritual cycle of the year. Through rhythm, ritual, festivals and depth of community we can learn how our thinking, feeling and doing affect the health of all levels of environment. And vice versa.

Presenters: Martin Samson, Fiona Campbell & Irmhild Kleinhenz.

Join us for this 3-day conference of lectures, experiential activities, discussion and healing. Martin will hold a pre-conference sacred nature practices day in the Newcastle/Maitland area, followed by star-gazing. The two events can be attended singly or together.

Martin Samson

Martin will offer insights into the interconnectedness of Etheric Geography, Sacred Landscapes, Dreaming and Meditation. The relationship between sorry business and earth healing is made clear through understanding various forms of consciousness that the human being can bring in ritual. Through Martin's work on the Cosmic Child Dreaming in the centre of Australia he will introduce ideas and ways to work with specific power spots for the healing of the earth the human organism.

- Martin Samson is a self-styled teacher, cultural commentator, poetic philosopher and theologian currently writing his PhD in the Christology of Rudolf Steiner. He has a Masters in Theological Studies and has spent many years studying cross-cultural religion, philosophy, mythology, and cosmology. He has lectured extensively about a global spiritual approach to the festivals in the southern hemisphere. His book on the festivals was published in 2016.
- He has worked on ceremony and Sorry business in collaboration with the Indigenous community in South Australia and has participated, trained and facilitated shamanic, druidic and pagan practices in many countries and sacred earth temples. He leads excursions into the Australian outback to explore connections with Aboriginal Australia and the southern stars.

The effect of the ecosystem on thinking

Fiona will offer two experiential workshops designed to strengthen our capacity for dynamic, creative thinking by connecting it to the living etheric forces of nature. When our thinking process becomes disconnected from nature, our perceptions are dulled and thought process hardened. Consequently, our thinking is not as dynamic and living as it should be.

The workshops use drawing techniques with contemplative practices and Goethean phenomenology. We will work with three specific training exercises for , through developing cognitive breathing, cognitive flexibility. and imaginative picture building to strengthen our capacity for generative thinking.

These training exercises are grounded in Fiona's phenomenological research on creative cognition. Her work also draws on the phenomenological studies of Theodor Schwenk, Henri Bortoft and Arthur Zajonc.

- Fiona teaches interdisciplinary research training, communications and consciousness studies. She has a special interest in Goethean phenomenology and creative cognition. She is also a professional artist

Irmhild Kleinhenz

Etheric geography can be a way to look at human physiology and the topography of the etheric body. We traverse the inner landscape of our bodies using imaginations, inspirations and intuitions to lead us to meeting the remedies along the path. Each substance contains a healing story hidden within it: we can unlock its mystery through meditations based upon the Rosicrucian path.

Presentation:

Using the work of Ernst Marti, Johannes Rohen, Karl Koenig and Paracelsus, we will explore the way in which we can discover and understand the healing work of the human etheric body. By observing how illness manifests itself and comparing it to the outer manifestations of disturbed etheric forces in Nature, we explore examples of the anthroposophic method of diagnosis.
